LBJ Alma Mater Asks His Critics To Be Lecturers

President Suggests
Texas College Invite Administration Aides
As Campus Speakers

SAN MARCOS, Tex., April 14

—Somewhat to his consternation, President Johnson learned Wednesday that his alma mater is importing guest speakers critical of the administration.

Visiting Southwest Texas State College, Mr. Johnson asked student leaders to describe current campus activity.

"Well, we've just heard Tom Ross," student body president Kelly Frels replied.

Mr. Ross is co-author of "The Invisible Government," a book about the Central Intelligence Agency.

"What did he talk about? I want to hear this," the President is reported to have said.

"Well, he said the CIA has grown too powerful," Mr. Frels said.

"I don't think so," Mr. Johnson said. He then suggested that other speakers from Washington would be available to speak on the campus. His list included CIA Director William Rayborn, White House Press Secretary Bill Moyers, White House science adviser Donald Horning and White House special assistant Jack Valenti.
